Individual Regents and members of the Regents' Investment Advisory Group (IAG) are prohibited from contacting the Treasurer's Office to offer advice or recommendations with respect to the selection of investments, investment managers, or investment management firms. The General Counsel's Office will promptly provide the Treasurer's Office with copies of all Statements of Economic Interest (Form 700) for all Regents and Treasurer's Office employees, as well as any information disclosed by Investment Advisory Group members pursuant to the Conflicts provisions of the Policy Establishing the Investment Advisory Group. Committee Chair Wachter called attention to existing conflict-of-interest rules for Regents and Investment Advisory Group (IAG) members which are part of California law, not a policy of the Regents. He recalled that the Committee had made a significant effort to understand these rules, working with the General Counsel, outside counsel, Chief Investment Officer Berggren, and others. He explained that there have been no problems with this issue in the University, but that these rules are not easy to interpret. A clear understanding of them is necessary in order to advise University employees properly.

Committee Chair Wachter described the Committee's earlier consensus on conflict of interest, a broad hard-line position that Regents and IAG members should not be involved in the selection of investment managers. Various rules implied that they could or could not be involved, depending on circumstances. Committee Chair Wachter expressed his concern that a Regent might honestly think it permissible to be involved when in fact it is not permissible.

Committee Chair Wachter pointed out that the most significant part of the proposed amendment is the first sentence: "Individual Regents and members of the Regents' Investment Advisory Group (IAG) are prohibited from contacting the Treasurer's Office to offer advice or recommendations with respect to the selection of investments, investment managers, or investment management firms." He asked the General Counsel if the word "investments" is appropriate and not too broad a designation. He noted that the Committee should not advise the University on very specific investments, such as the purchase of an office building. However, the Committee is charged with advising the University on its asset allocations, in bonds, stocks, or other forms.

General Counsel Robinson suggested the addition of a clarifying sentence to address this concern, after the end of the first sentence: "Nothing herein precludes a Regent or IAG member from contacting the Treasurer's Office in connection with investment policies established by the Regents' Committee on Investments." Committee Chair Wachter requested inclusion of the words: "specific selection of investments."

Committee Chair Wachter stated that a Regent is allowed to contact the Treasurer's Office to discuss asset allocation issues from a previous meeting or investment policies. There is much Regents are permitted to do within asset allocation. Now, through this policy, the Regents are prohibiting themselves from recommending a specific investment manager. Committee Chair Wachter described this policy as a reaction to the law.

Mr. Robinson cautioned that there might be circumstances when general investment recommendations could be a violation of the Political Reform Act, to the extent that a Regent is a public official.

Regent Marcus stressed that it is his responsibility as a fiduciary to disclose what he knows. The intention of the law is to ensure that the Regents are not beneficiaries of specific recommendations they might make. This could be included in the policy. The law should not imply that Regents may make no recommendations whatsoever.

Committee Chair Wachter concurred, and expressed his opinion that the law is not consistent with the Regents' fiduciary duties and the role of the Committee on Investments. He stressed that Regents are in danger of violating the law by providing recommendations about specific funds or investment managers to the Chief Investment Officer, depending on their relationship to the fund or manager, and discussed hypothetical examples. He expressed the hope that the law will be changed in the future.

Regent Marcus noted that the law is confusing, and asked about the rationale for the policy. Mr. Robinson replied that the policy is designed to clarify the situation and to avoid a complicated, case-by-case determination.

Regent Marcus observed that the University has never had a problem with this in the past. Committee Chair Wachter responded that, in the past, there has been a lack of clarity or understanding about what the rules are. The Regents should not attempt to interpret the rules for themselves. He reiterated his concern about the danger that a Regent would wish to share advice about a profitable investment with the Chief Investment Officer.

Regent Marcus countered with another example, a case in which a Regent wishes to advise against or warn about a bad investment. Mr. Robinson suggested that it might be possible for a Regent to contact the Office of the General Counsel to determine if this kind of communication would be a violation.

Regent Marcus stated that an individual Regent who communicates information is not exercising influence. Mr. Robinson observed that the law is clear that such discussions could constitute influence.

Regent De La Peña suggested that there could be an intermediary in this situation.

Committee Chair Wachter opined that a Regent should contact the General Counsel in this situation. He observed that Regents, in the past, have not felt the need to communicate with the Chief Investment Officer about investment managers. Regent Marcus concurred and opined that this matter is not a serious problem.

Committee Chair Wachter recalled that the University received press attention last year about conflict of interest issues, which he described as unfair. He cautioned that someone might make an issue of this law in the future; the University must be prepared for this possibility. He emphasized the stringency of the law, and the fact that it is against the law for a Regent to introduce the University to a manager who has made money for him or her, even if the Regent has no personal financial interest.

Chief Investment Officer Berggren recalled the events of the previous year, when a group that scrutinizes the University looked at the University's investment managers and at the IAG membership, and informed the San Francisco Chronicle that there was a serious conflict of interest at the University. The group alleged that UC had invested in two firms in which IAG members had an interest. She stressed that the individuals involved were not voting members of the Committee on Investments, and that this was an issue of perception.

Regent Marcus opined that some problems have been created by the press and media. Committee Chair Wachter concurred, and stated that the Committee is now creating a solution for what has so far been a non-existent problem. He underscored that the Committee must anticipate future problems.

Regent Brewer asked if the proposed policy is stronger than the law. Mr. Robinson answered in the affirmative. Regent Brewer asked if the Chief Investment Officer is prohibited from seeking an opinion from a Regent about an investment manager. Committee Chair Wachter confirmed that this is against the law. If a Regent has any financial interest as defined, he or she is prohibited from offering an opinion. He emphasized that the law has a broad definition of "financial interest."

Regent Marcus asked what recourse the University has if a Regent violates this policy. Mr. Robinson responded that the same enforcement issue exists for any Regental policy. While the law has punishment for violation, the Regents can only censure their own members.

Regent Marcus stated that adoption of the policy will not change the media perception or coverage of the University. Committee Chair Wachter stated that it will be good for incoming members of the Committee on Investments to have greater clarity about the rules.

Upon motion duly made and seconded, the Committee approved Regent Wachter's recommendation and voted to present it to the Board, with the following change, the addition of the word “specific,” to the first sentence of the amendment:

“Individual Regents and members of the Regents’ Investment Advisory Group (IAG) are prohibited from contacting the Treasurer’s Office to offer advice or recommendations with respect to the selection of specific investments, investment managers, or investment management firms.”

The meeting adjourned at 5:35 p.m.
